SUIT CASE THIEF RETURNED HERE

Fred Floyd, Brother of Man Who Disappeared, Captured in Indianapolis After Running 9 Squares

GRAND LARCENY CHARGE

Leaped From Second Story Window
in Effort to Escape—Will Face
Judge Tomorrow.

Deputy sheriffs from Indianapolis arrived here this afternoon with Fred Floyd, colored, a brother of Richard Floyd, the barber that disappeared from this city Saturday night. Fred Floyd was arrested on a grand larceny charge filed in the circuit court. The disappearance of Richard Floyd is directly responsible for the arrest of his brother. In going through his effects at the home of John Ferguson a suit case was found which proved to be the property of Miss Olive Traylor of Connersville which was stolen from the local traction station last September.

The finding and identifying of the stolen property led to the arrest of Floyd. The warrant was sent to the sheriff of Marion county last night and they found him at 225 West St. Clair street. He was arrested this morning at nine o'clock and was still in bed when the officers arrived. He admitted them to his room and while dressing suddenly leaped from the window. His jump from the second story window furnished a thrill for the Indianapolis officers and for a time it looked as though he would escape. Floyd landed on the cement sidewalk but this did not stop his flight as he was up and gone again in an instant.

The officers fired several shots at the fleeing man but he did not stop and gave the officers a chase of nine squares before he was finally captured. Floyd was severely injured in the jump from the window and was unable to be arraigned this afternoon before Judge Megee. The sheriffs did not tell him on what charge he was wanted and because he tried to escape they think he has done something unlawful in Indianapolis. He has been there since last September.

The chances are that he would never have been caught but for the sudden leaving of his brother Richard. Richard Floyd was engaged to be married to Miss Maude Overton and after he left Mrs. Jane Overton the girl's mother told Chief McAllister about the suit case. Allen Daniels proprietor of the barber shop where Floyd was employed received a postal card from him yesterday. The card was mailed in this city and was evidently sent back here to a friend to be mailed. Floyd gave his reason for leaving to Mr. Daniels and stated that he was sorry he could not have stayed and explained. His reason was that he could not marry Miss Overton according to the creed of the Catholic church of which he was a member and rather than stay here and face the music he preferred to leave. Fred Floyd will probably be brought before the court tomorrow morning.

AS GOOD AS ANY, EH!

Newcastle Times: Certain newspapers seem to be worried over a jovial remark by James E. Watson that he expected to be the next nominee for President. If we are to have a Republican President, Mr. Watson would likely make as good as any and there is no reason for agitation even though his remarks were made in earnest.

POOR PRICES ARE REPORTED

Many Rushville Men Are Attending
Lackey Horse Sale.

Many horse fanciers journeyed to Cambridge City today to attend the annual Lackey sale. Men who attended yesterday brought back the report that the horses put on the block brought very poor prices, and that the promoters of the sale lost money. The weather was bad and the crowd, as a result, was very small. George Weeks, Jettie Shook, Clyde Nebro, Harrie Jones and other horsemen have been attending the sale. Martin Kelley and Ed Pitman intend to witness the auction tomorrow.

Mr. McFall is survived by a widow and six children, three sons and three daughters, all of whom live in Arlington. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. John Budd of Kokomo, and brother, Elwood McFall of Knightstown.

CONTRACTORS ARE MADE DEFENDANTS

Clinton Weston Files Suit For $5,000
Damages For Injuries Received in Orange.

NAMES CONNERSVILLE MEN

Clinton Weston, through his attorneys, Kiplinger and Williams, filed suit for damages this afternoon in the Fayette circuit court against John F. Ryan and Oscar Medd. He demands $5,000. Weston was injured in a fall from a scaffold last August while working on the Orange school house. The complaint states that the two men named as defendants were the contractors and that he was in their employ at the time of the accident.

The plaintiff states that he was ordered by the defendants to weather board a part of the building and in order to do so it was necessary for him to use a scaffold eighteen feet from the ground. He alleges that the scaffold was not amply, adequately and properly constructed and that through the negligence of the defendants it gave way and he fell the distance of 18 feet and that he was injured in the fall to such an extent that he has not since been able to work.

SUBSIDY MEN EXPECT TO WIN

It is Estimated Vote in City Will be 15 to 1 in Favor of I. & C.

Tax

65 PER CENT VOTE EXPECTED

Not Believed Majority in Noble and Richland Townships Would be so Large.

It was estimated this afternoon that possibly between sixty-five and seventy per cent. of the vote would be cast in the special election today, held to vote a small subsidy tax to the Indianapolis & Cincinnati Traction company to buy right-of-way not donated for the extension of the interurban from this city to Cincinnati.

Friends of the subsidy asserted this afternoon that the vote in Rushville township would be about fifteen in favor of the subsidy to one against it. The ratio, they thought, would not be so large in Richland and Noble townships. There was no doubt expressed but that the subsidy would carry in all three townships by good majorities.

According to news from Richland township at two o'clock, the largest vote up to that time had been cast there. Information by telephone was that it was expected would be cast east. This is a much larger per cent. that it was expected would be cast in any district. The unanimous opinion in Richland township was that the subsidy would carry by an overwhelming majority.

Friends of subsidy were not so optimistic in Noble township. A few over a hundred votes had been cast at the polling place in the town of New Salem. This was said to be a little over fifty per cent. of the vote. No word could be obtained from the north precinct in Noble township. Few people in Noble township liked to venture an opinion on the results, but there were some who believed that the subsidy would carry.

The ideal weather conditions were thought to be in favor of the subsidy. It was advocated by friends of the subsidy that the favorable weather would increase the majority for the special tax. They argued that bad weather would not keep any of the subsidy's enemies away from the polls, but that it would keep friends away.

At noon about fifty per cent of the normal vote had been cast in the city of Rushville. The vote was about the average in precinct No. 1, voting at Grant Gregg's residence in East Second street.

In precinct No. 2, voting at A. B. Irvin's garage there were 73 out of a possible 175 votes cast at noon. Much of this precinct was outside of the corporation line, but even then it was estimated that the subsidy received a big majority.

In No. 3, voting at Mrs. Ford's residence, corner of Sexton and Fourth streets, the vote was about the average of the rest of the city precincts. There are 221 votes in the precinct.

In precinct No. 4, voting at the Innis-Pearce garage, 149 votes had been cast after the noon hour. This was about the average for the city precincts.

The vote in precinct No. 5, cast at Tully's residence in West Seventh street, was below the average. Most of this precinct lies outside the corporation line.

Up to one o'clock only 94 out of a possible 238 votes had been cast at the Windsor hotel, precinct No. 6. It was thought many more

HANKINS FINED BY JUDGE MEGEE

Richland Man Sentenced to Jail For Intoxication But Let go on Good Behavior.

INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Court Declared Sherles Brown Legally Dead—Not Been Seen For Five Years.

In acting on the petition of Charles H. Brown against Sherles M. Brown to appoint an administrator, Judge Megee declared Sherles M. Brown legally dead and returned judgment for the plaintiff. It was brought out that the whereabouts of Sherles Brown have not been known for the last five years and that there was a presumption of death.

A general denial was filed by the defendants in the damage case of John F. Kirk against Samuel H. Trabue and Harry Trabue. The plaintiff demands $175. The case is known as the moon-eyed horse case. Clayton Wolverton filed a petition to modify a decree, against Blanch Wolverton. Mrs. Wolverton was granted a divorce by Judge Blair and the custody of their children. The plaintiff alleges that she is in Connersville and that he has been unable to see the child on account of Mrs. Wolverton's parents. He lives in Newcastle at present.

Joseph Hankins of Richland was arraigned before Judge Megee this morning on the charge of public intoxication and was fined one dollar and costs and given five days in jail. The sentence and fine was suspended by the court on the promise of good behavior from Hankins. Hankins was indicted by the last grand jury and his arrest leaves only one indictment that has not been served. He was arrested yesterday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Kinnear at his home in Richland. Hankins was reported to have fired a revolver at his wife some time ago while intoxicated and the matter was taken up by the grand jury. The firing of the revolver evidently must have proved false as he was only indicted for intoxication.

There were nineteen indictments returned by the grand jury and Hankins' arrest was the eighteenth since the grand jury adjourned. The one remaining indictment is said to be of minor importance.

WOMEN'S HOME TO OPEN

Refuge Left by D. H. Thompson is Located at Waldron.

The Delos H. Thompson Home for Aged and Indigent Women, left by the terms of the will of Mr. Thompson, will be opened in May. The home is in Waldron, and the announcement comes from Melvin A. Beagh, treasurer of the Universalist Convention of Indiana. Mr. Beagh has filed his first annual report in regard to the estate. It shows the fund for the maintenance of the home is $23,216.30, and the fund for building and supporting the Universalist churches is $15,216.30.

Fireman in Irvington Smash-up
Seeking $10,000 Damages.

The trial of the first damage suit growing out of the C. H. & D. wreck in Irvington, November 13, 1912, which cost sixteen lives, was begun yesterday in an Indianapolis superior court. Fred Emberton, fireman on the freight train into which the passenger train crashed, is the plaintiff. He asks $10,000 damages. He alleges he was scalded, bruised and that his nervous system has been impaired as a result of his injuries.

George Lockwood Says Enemies of James E. Watson's Attempting to Belittle Him Display Envy.

EDITORIAL IN MUNCIE PRESS

George Lockwood says editorially in the Muncie Press:

A Richmond man, Everett H. Thompson, writes to the Indianapolis Star, complaining against the continual belittling of James E. Watson by his political enemies in Indiana, saying that no man who travels about the country and comes in touch with people whose judgment is worth while can be ignorant of the fact that Mr. Watson has achieved a creditable national reputation, and one that reflects honor upon the state. It is doubtful if Mr. Watson is much worried by the fistic bark at the heels of every man who rises above mediocrity, in Indiana as elsewhere. Mr. Watson is easily the most effective political speaker in the United States, his oratory deriving its effectiveness and charm deriving its effectiveness and charm quite as much from the fact that Mr. Watson is a thinker of great ability and a patriotic student of public affairs, as from the eloquence with which the Indiana leader habitually clothes his utterances. The little Indians who sneer at James E. Watson only advertise their own narrowness and envy.

LEE PYLE IS SECRETARY.

HE WOULD BRING SCIENTIST HERE

Charitable Rushville Man Suggests
Efforts to Induce Dr. Friedmann to Come Out West.

WOULD START FUND AT $100.00

To Bring German Who Claims to Have Tuberculosis Cure Within Reach of People.

A charitable Rushville man comes forward today with the suggestion that an effort be made to bring Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedmann, the Berlin doctor and scientist, to Indiana to treat patients suffering with tuberculosis. He says that he will start a fund with a hundred dollar donation to get in touch with the physician.

The German scientist startled the world recently by the announcement that he had a culture which would cure tuberculosis. American scientists and physicians hooted at his assertion. To prove it Dr. Friedmann came to America recently and is now treating scores of patients every day. He gave the treatment to fifty-six patients at a Canadian clinic yesterday.

The Rushville man is anxious that an effort be made to attract Dr. Friedmann to this section of the country, so that he could be reached by many people in Rush county who are afflicted with the white plague.

The charitable gentleman is not so optimistic as to believe that Dr. Friedmann could be induced to come to Rushville, but he thinks that the German scientist might at least be persuaded to journey to Chicago, Cincinnati, or even to Indianapolis, to display his new cure, and that a special car for Rush county patients to carry them to the doctor might be arranged for.

The idea is wholly original with this man. He believes that the people of the United States will soon be clamoring for Dr. Friedmann and that now is the opportunity to make an attempt to bring him to the middle west. He indicates that he is sincere by offering to open the fund with a donation of a hundred dollars.

The Rushville man believes that this would offer a worthy field of endeavor for the Social Service and Civic Improvement Association of Rushville. The conservation of human life is a laudable undertaking.

"I know the American scientists have been knocking Dr. Friedmann," said the man who made the suggestion today, "but they have not yet proved that the German does not know what he is talking about. He must have what he claims to have,

GERMANS TAKE DOLEFUL VIEW

Developing a Bad Case of Financial Nerves.

A SITUATION AKIN TO PANIC

Suspense and Uncertainty as to the Future Have Created a Feeling of Deep Uneasiness Over the International Situation, Which Has Been Reflected in the Withdrawal of Gold and General Tightening of Money.

Berlin, March 12.—A bad case of financial nerves is being developed in Germany. The outward symptoms are apparent in deep uneasiness over the international situation and suspense and uncertainty felt as to the future. This, together with the tightness of money and the scarcity of gold are the chief features of an uneasy situation.

The warlike leader of the semi-official Cologne Gazette declaring that war with France was a certainty, is regarded as unskillful politics and is much deplored in financial circles. The combination of the effect of this feeling, together with press statements that the international situation appears less hopeful, has again brought about a panicky feeling, and prices on the bourse have had a decided slump, even bank stocks losing two points, while some of the prominent Americans have fallen as much as six points.

Inquiry among banking, industrial, mercantile and business circles, elicited the information that many things are causing worry. The armament program of the government calling for an expenditure for military extensions of $350,000,000, is reacting on all business. The withdrawal of saving deposits is being accentuated. Withdrawals, which in the last quarter exceeded deposits by $17,000,000, it is reported, are again increasing. Nothing like runs exists in the situation, but the persistent increase of withdrawals is greatly decreasing the available money.

The banks are making efforts to secure more gold. While it is said that only $500,000 is enroute from New York, it is reported that arrangements have been made for the shipping from America of $20,000,000 of gold if it is needed. The banks generally are preparing for the settlement of April 1 and looking forward to it with uneasiness.

Inquiries in mercantile lines indicate that the public is fearful of the future and is cutting down expenditures. One large piano manufacturer said that business had fallen off 60 per cent. Jewelers and department stores say that sudden stagnation has come upon their business. Big manufacturers complain of the cancellation and decrease of orders.

Following the failure of his bank and the suicide of Banker Fritsch at Stuttgart, Ferdinand Stern, banker of Hanover, committed suicide at his home city when he saw that the failure of his bank was inevitable.

SITUATION BEING FORCED

This Is the Suggestion That Finds Belief in London.

London, March 12.—The German situation has given rise to much talk of an early advance in the bank rate because of the money tightness here. Possibility of an advance is exemplified by the unusually stiff carry-over rates in the stock exchange settlement now progressing. Bankers' loans to the market were as high as 5 1/4 per cent. Since the Berlin unloading of the last few days, brought about by the disturbing financial conditions prevailing in Germany, Canadian Pacific has lost 10 1/2 points, Union Pacific 5 1/2, Consols 15-16.

It is suggested here that powerful financial interests hostile to the new German war taxation are deliberately keeping money out of the market with the intention of making the situation look worse than it really is.

Was Promised an Easy Life.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 12.—Mrs. Emma Jackson was found guilty in the circuit court of enticing a sixteen-year-old girl to become an inmate of a resort. The jury fixed the penalty at a fine of $300 and costs and imprisonment from two to ten years. The girl testified that she met the woman at the fair grounds and was induced to go home with the woman, who promised her an easy life and fine clothes.

Escaped With a Few Scratches.

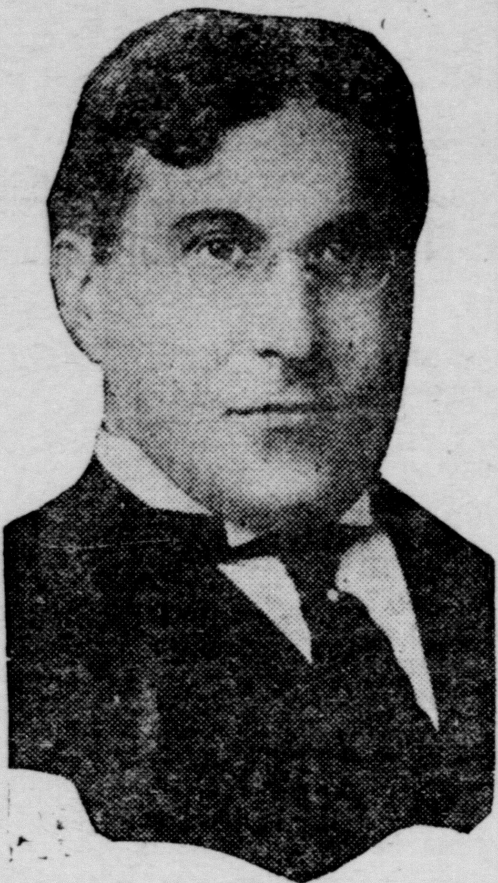

Warsaw, Ind., March 12.—Susie, the eight-year-old daughter of J. L. Andreas, and Naoma, fifteen-year-old daughter of Jefferson Young, were occupants of a storm buggy which was demolished by a Pennsylvania passenger train. The horse was killed and the buggy was torn to pieces. The little girls escaped with only a few scratches.

Postoffice Robbers Convicted.

Indianapolis, March 12.—Eleven minutes after the jury in federal court got the case wherein Clyde Stratton and Fred Fernsdorf were charged with robbing the postoffice at McCool, Ind., it returned a verdict of guilty and Judge Anderson sentenced the defendants to terms of five years each in the federal prison at Leavenworth.

MILITANT SUFFS ARE HAVING A HARD TIME

The British Public Turning Against Them.

London, March 12.—The wildest crowd they have yet encountered drove the militant suffragettes, against whom the people have turned and who have been having a hard time recently, from a hall in Nottingham last night. The first speaker had hardly begun to speak when a detonator was discharged in the back seats. This caused terrible alarm. The explosion was followed by stamping and hooting and the setting off of fire crackers.

Annie Kenney tried to speak but was heckled about the burning of two or three railway stations. She answered that the suffragettes had been compelled to resort to extreme measures but that Nottingham men ought to be proud of such actions inasmuch as their ancestors had burned Nottingham castle in order to get the franchise. The descendants of these historic firebugs were not convinced by this statement and resumed the racket. Meanwhile the crowd outside raised a tremendous din in trying to force an entrance to the hall. The police held their ground and kept them back after a sharp tussle.

A male suffragist followed Miss Kenney. He had hardly started to speak when a loud crash behind the platform and a roar of excited voices showed that the mob had burst into the back entrance to the hall. They immediately carried the platform by storm and the women rushed screaming for the entrance only to be driven back by other crowds which were surging into the hall. A general fight followed and men and women fought with their fists. Faces were clawed and scratched and millinery flew in all directions. Finally the police formed a cordon and got Miss Kenney and her party in safety to an ante-room. There they were guarded until an opportunity was found to smuggle them out. The interior of the hall was ruined.

Mediation Proposal Accepted. Sofia, March 12.—The official newspaper Mir says that the Balkan allies have accepted the proposal for European mediation. The allies stipulate, however, that Turkey must pay an indemnity. Hostilities, it is further stated, will continue during the negotiations.

Notorious French Bandit Taken.

Paris, March 12.—Lacombe, the notorious bandit, who was connected with the Bonnet-Garnier gang, has been arrested in the Villetta quarter.

ROLE THAT CHANCE PLAYS

Dr. Crane Declares It Is One of Chief Elements of Success Combined With Something Else.

Say all you please about the reign of law, pooh-pooh at luck, and pish-tush at hoodoos; the fact remains that one of the chief elements in success is chance, writes Dr. Frank Crane.

Men have made fortunes, won battles, achieved fame and captured women's hearts, because things happened just right. A bad run of luck has not only broken men at cards, but it has kept men from being elected to the presidency, ruined business men's careers, thwarted the schemes of diplomats and lost kings their thrones and now and again their heads.

Even in the pie of all-lawful science, fickle Lady Fortune has put a vigorous finger. The Watts boy watches his grandmother's kettle and stumbles upon the biggest idea of the nineteenth century—the steam engine. Newton observes a falling apple and discovers the law of gravitation. The vulcanization of rubber, the master secret of this rubber age, was due to an accident. And Champollion guessed—just plain guessed—the meaning of the Egyptian hieroglyphics.

So, it's all luck? Not at all. It's about half luck. The other half is—the alert mind.

Luck is the pitcher; the alert mind is the catcher.

The formula for success is half luck—half me.

All the good fortune in the world will be of no use if I am not wide awake and do not grab the ball when it is thrown. Also, not all my skill and wit will avail if chances does not bring something my way.

To say "What's the use? It's all luck" is wrong. It is also an error for one to imagine he can win the game of success with mathematical certainty. The truth lies between.

Optimism.

Hope is a quality of the spirit of man more stubborn of its ground than life itself. It dwells not "in the suburbs of the soul, but holds its place rather as a window through which the future may be seen. It lets us in to the dark places with a confident stride that otherwise we would shuffle through by halting steps. It shows the little things by which we climb, so that we make of hindrances a kind of lookout from which to take a survey of the land beyond. And if that land seems better than it be, we care not, because it never lets us near enough to know.

You Can Take Defective Material and Build a Buggy

Then you can take putty and paint and by properly applying these two articles change the appearance of this defective vehicle so it will deceive even the shrewdest of vehicle buyers. We have found out by experience that there is only one test that never fails to expose defective material and unskilled workmanship. Manufacturers have told us that their vehicles were built of a certain kind of material and by men who understood how to build buggies and in the wind-up we found they had misrepresented the matter to us. We are going to protect the interests of our customers and sell them exactly what we tell them we are selling them, and have adopted the plan illustrated below to determine for ourselves what each vehicle we sell is made of. A vehicle that will stand a test of this kind must be built of material that has no flaws and by men who have had experience enough to know where to re-enforce each part of the vehicle in order to give strength and make it wear.

It is your duty to find out what is under the paint of every vehicle you buy and if you buy it of us you can certainly have that privilege. We want you to come to our opening on MARCH 14th and 15th, and let us show you buggies that are built to give road service by men who know how to build them.

HE REAFFIRMS TAFT POLICIES

Mr. Wilson Tells Latin America to Be Good.

INSISTS UPON LAW AND ORDER

Agitators Who Had Been Expecting to Take Advantage of the New Administration to Turn Things Over in Central America Find Cold Comfort in First Statement by New President on Subject of Our Foreign Relations.

Washington, March 12.—The first indication of the foreign policies of his administration has just been given by President Wilson. He has issued a statement dealing with the relations between the United States and the countries of Latin America, which practically is a reaffirmation of the Taft policies, and serves notice on the turbulent elements of Latin America that the United States will insist upon law, order and constitutional government in the southern republics.

The Wilson statement is a direct thrust at Castro, Zelaya and others understood to be plotting the destruction of existing governments in certain Latin America countries. It is a severe blow to the plans of those professional revolutionists who had convinced themselves that under a Democratic administration at Washington license would be permitted in Central America.

The president undoubtedly issued his statement chiefly for the purpose of disabusing the agitators of Latin America of any notion that the Taft policies for the upholding of good government in those countries would be repudiated. But the statement has another significance. It is construed as notice to the riuerta government in Mexico City that the United States will not recognize it until it has itself received the indorsement of the majority of the people in Mexico in a regular election.

There is found in the statement also assurances to the business interests in the United States who have participated in business relations with the countries of Latin America that they will not be disregarded by the present administration.

Mr. Wilson asserts that the aims of his administration will be to promote trade relations between the United States and the countries of Central and South America. While promising that such interest in trade relations shall not interfere with the rights and liberties of the Latin American countries, the belief here is that the practical application of the Wilson policy will result in the same support to legitimate commercial enterprise as they have enjoyed under Republican administrations in the last sixteen years. This support to legitimate business enterprises in foreign lands and the promotion of trade relations is nothing more nor less than the "dollar diplomacy" which many Democrats, including officers of the present administration and Democratic members of congress, have repeatedly asserted would not be a part of the new regime.

The Mexican Situation.

The recognition of the Huerta government in Mexico is now squarely up to the Wilson administration, inasmuch as the United States has been asked to receive Senor Babasa, who has been named for the post of ambassador at Washington. Consent to receive Senor Babasa as ambassador would of course be equivalent to recognition of the new government. Secretary of State Bryan has refused to discuss the question, just as he also declined to discuss any matter of foreign relations. The impression is that recognition will be deferred until there has been an election in Mexico. No changes will be made in the disposition of any troops now on the Mexican border, it was announced by Secretary of War Garrison. The secretary made this announcement after receiving a report from Brigadier General Tasker H. Bliss, who was ordered to make an inspection of the locations of the American forces on the border with a view to withdrawing the soldiers from the actual boundary line if possible. General Bliss reported that none of the American patrols is any nearer the international boundary line than is absolutely necessary. Even at Douglas, Ariz., where the situation is most critical at present, none of the American troops are under observation from the Mexican side. General Bliss stated in his report that the American troops are performing their difficult duty with great discretion.

GOVERNOR DECLINES GARY SALOONS AID

Refuses to Accept Bill for Their Relief.

Indianapolis, March 12.—The bill to validate the licenses of 169 saloon keepers that caused so much commotion in the house was rejected by Governor Ralston. The bill did not reach the governor within the time designated in which he must receive bills, and it was therefore optional with him whether he would receive the bill, and as he did not choose to receive the measure it thus dies.

The attempt to validate the licenses of these 169 saloon keepers of Gary took up a great deal of time in the house, and a number of members protested that they had been recorded as voting for the bill when they were either absent or voted the other way. Had a true and correct roll been kept on the bill it would have failed for lack of a constitutional majority. The record showed that it was passed by fifty-two votes. Representative Dunham declared that he was improperly recorded in favor and his name was taken off.

This left a bare constitutional majority of fifty-one votes. Representative Dickinson declared that he had voted against the bill and not for it, and he demanded that the bill be recalled from the senate, so that the roll could be called again and the members' votes be recorded correctly. A resolution to this effect passed the house, but the matter was allowed to drift in the senate, and no further action was taken before the session ended.

CONSUMPTION SYMPTOMS

Yield to Vinol.

The medical profession does not believe that consumption is inherited, but a person may inherit a weakness or tendency to that disease.

A prominent citizen of Evansville, Ind., writes: "I was ill for five months with a pulmonary trouble, and had the best of doctors; I had hemorrhages and was in a very bad way. Through the advice of a friend I tried Vinol, and I feel that it saved my life. It is all you recommend it to be. I believe it is the greatest medicine on earth. I have advised others to try Vinol, and they have had the same results." (Name furnished on request.)

Vinol soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces and allays the cough, Vinol creates an appetite, strengthens the digestive organs and gives the patient strength to throw off incipient pulmonary diseases.

PLEA FOR KINDNESS TO CHILDREN MADE IN PLAY.

"A Good Little Devil" Has Remarkable Speech For Little Ones.

In David Belasco's production of "A Good Little Devil" in New York there is one remarkable speech which Ernest Truex, in his fine performance of Charles MacLance, delivers with such tenderness that all the big people in the audience go through the "business of swallowing bumps." The "good little devil" is starved and beaten by his cruel ogress of an aunt. Finally he steps out over the footlights and speaks direct to the audience this plea for the child:

"Mothers, fathers, everybody, do not be unkind. We are children for such a little while. Love is very fragile, children very small. Can't you hear the cry that is raised in all the land, the cry of those who are scolded without reason, without justice? Ah, do not be unkind! The cry is in the palace, in the village, in the hovel. Listen! Can't you hear it? I am no longer Charles, no longer a child in a fairy play. I am all children—all children who are wounded and hurt, whose lonely hearts are broken by punishment and neglect.

"All the children in the world have asked me to speak for them tonight. And all the grown up children, too; the men who have failed, who are too weak, too dumb with sorrow, to speak for themselves; all the bewildered, the neglected, the terrified, the forgotten—all have asked me to speak for them tonight. I am no longer Charles—I am just a little boy laying bare his heart to try to make you understand.

"You may punish little children with severity and hatred, but never so will you win them to be good. No. The hands that are holding these old world weapons are growing feebler and feebler every day. They are dying, they are dying, they are dead, and love is coming into the hearts of men."

Mme. Rostand and her son, Maurice, are the authors of "A Good Little Devil," but it seems safe to assert that only a mother could have written such a speech as this.

TELEPHONE NUMBER, 1111.

Wednesday, March 12, 1913.

On his way to Washington Mr. Bryan halted at Raleigh to deliver an address on "Peace," having accepted an invitation from the North Carolina Peace Conference in session there. Mr. Bryan had an unusually large audience, as might have been expected from the fact that he was about to become secretary of state, the head of the department dealing directly with international relations. He argued at Raleigh that it is the imperative duty of the United States to co-operate in every possible way with other world-campaign for peace. The administration just closed was active in this direction, even beyond the average sentiment of the country. But Mr. Bryan went farther by proposing that the United States should "set a shining example of disarmament," and declared that this nation is "peculiarly fitted in standing and location to take this stand boldly."

If Mr. Bryan means that this country is well located to defend itself against invasion there is, geographically, some degree of truth in his theory. But the new secretary of state should tell how the principles of the Monroe doctrine can be maintained by a nation disarmed. He recommends a bold stand for disarmament. The idea conveyed is that the way to disarm is to disarm, reduce army and navy, and encourage young Americans to join peace societies rather than take the training of the National Guard or enlist for service with the busy fleets that are now assigned to our Atlantic and Pacific coasts. European powers are not disarming. They are adding to their battle-ship strength and enlarging their armies on an active footing. Mr. Bryan has had some large disappointments as a theorist and has not before carried serious national responsibilities. It is probable that the new Congress, if not the new cabinet, will stop his disarmament talk.

St. Patrick.

Rarely do you find any one man enthroned in the hearts of a people as is St. Patrick in the affections of the Irish. The French may revere the memory of their Joan of Arc. But you do not often find the citizens of French descent parading American streets the way these of Irish blood turn out for March 17. St. Patrick is not a typical national hero. The Jews look back to King David, the Greeks to Alexander the Great, the French to Joan, the Americans to Washington. These were all persons of blood and iron, whose larger achievements were recorded in the strife of battle.

Patrick's chief glory is that he founded 365 churches and planted a school beside each, and that he civilized the people. Deeds like these do not seem very spectacular when they are being done. But they promote human happiness far more than the slaughter commemorated.

A merchant in a neighboring city placed this notice on a billboard: Smith Sells All Kinds of Yarns. A humorist coming along changed the "S" to a "T." Then it read: Smith Tells All Kinds of Yarns. This actual happening illustrates one weakness of our door advertising and the better service of newspaper publicity.

Mr. Bryan would not have mentioned a brief tenure for himself in the cabinet by accident. He has been boss of the party and free lance so long that he purposely retains the old latchkey.

Inquiry into the conduct of the Washington police during the suffrage parade is lending strength to the idea that there should be some women police.

SHARES HONORS WITH BEST BILL

Law Making Vocational Training in Public Schools Possible Had Little Rough Sledding.

2 ROAD MEASURES PASSED

Hawkins-Spencer Law Creates Office of Road Superintendent For Each County.

A measure which shares with the public service commission law the honor of being one of the most important matters considered during the legislature is the bill for the establishment of industrial and agricultural training in the public schools. It will have a wide and lasting effect on the public as it creates a memorable departure in public school activities. It is one good bill that did not have much "rough sledding" in the legislature, and was passed almost in the identical form recommended by the state commission which investigated the subject.

This commission had been appointed through the enactment of a law two years ago, and was composed of representatives of the legislature, the labor interests, the employing interests and the farming interests. The commission made investigation and took evidence in various parts of the state to learn local conditions and needs, studied the laws of other states, and, as a result of its deliberations, recommended to the present legislature a law which has been pronounced by experts of national reputation as the best law of the kind on the statute books of any state.

For the first time in the history of the state's educational system, employers, employees and farmers are to have official recognition in the management and supervision of the schools. The state board of education is to be recognized to meet this situation, and employers and employees, as well as agriculturists, are to be members of advisory boards whose duty it will be to consult with township school trustees and with school boards concerning the operation of the agricultural and industrial schools. The law makes the new lines of studies and endeavor a part of the public school system, instead of separate from it, and recognizes fully the new awakening that more attention is needed for educating the youth so they will be more proficient in the trades, in agriculture and in domestic science.

The bill which was passed was the Stahl house bill, but the measure actually originated in the senate, as Senator Yarrling, a member of the state commission, introduced a similar measure there first, which gave way for the Stahl measure. The bill provides for sufficient appropriations to carry out the plans outlined. Another bill of importance in the educational world, which became a law, was the Curtis bill for the establishment of uniform text books in the high schools.

The Bull Moose attempt to get a free text book bill through met with dismal failure. Free text books measures were quickly killed in both houses.

While the house defeated the Hughes highway commission bill, and thus greatly tickled the powerful road contractors and railway lobby that for several years has blocked all attempts at highway betterment in Indiana, the legislature dealt what is now believed to be an effective blow at this same lobby when it passed the Biddle bill. That bill permits the working out of road taxes only up to $20 in each township. Thus any excess over $20 must be paid in cash. This is not all that is believed to be necessary to wipe out the evils that have grown up in Indiana's road system, but it is regarded as unquestionably a very valuable step in the right direction. Hereafter, it is believed, the powerful road lobby will be crippled and two years hence will not see this lobby in all its glory working effectively with a legislature.

The Hawkins-G. W. Spencer highway bill also passed. This pertains to the county highways. It creates the office of a road superintendent for the county, thus taking the direct supervision of the highways out of the hands of the county commissioners. It also contemplates a system of patrol on the highways at least once every thirty days, in order to discover defects, such as chuck-holes, washes and the like.

It is expected that the funds for good roads will be greatly increased through the passage of the Netterville graduated automobile tax bill. This measure also seeks to regulate the operation of all motor vehicles. Another bill for the regulation of automobiles is the "anti-joy riding" measure, passed by both houses which provides heavy penalties for persons operating vehicles without permission of the owners.

else he would not have the temerity to come to America and give demonstrations of his treatment.

"I do not believe we could do a more charitable thing than bring Dr. Friedmann within reach of the people of Rush county who are afflicted with the disease. Even if it required a special car, and nurses and physicians to accompany them to the nearest point where Dr. Friedmann could be reached, it would be worth while to make the attempt, even though only one life were saved from an untimely end."

Any person who is interested in the suggestion of the Rushville man will be informed as to the workings of the plan if he will call at the Republican office, and the proper interest is shown, it is probable that the idea can be carried to completion.

In a recent editorial the Journal of the American Medical Association, the best medical periodical in the United States and an authority on all such topics, scouts the idea that Dr. Friedmann had a tuberculosis "cure," but is willing to see the proof. The Journal says that practically every fact that has been brought forward by Dr. Friedmann has been known to the medical world for years, and that no new principle has been discovered. The Journal can not understand that the bacillus from the turtle, with which Dr. Friedmann's cures are made, possess any curative value for the human being. The periodical editorial makes the admission, however, that it is within the range of possibility that such a thing is true.

News dispatches today tell of the Friedmann treatment being applied to fifty-six patients at the Royal Edward institute at Montreal, Canada, yesterday.

Dr. Friedmann's patients were selected from a list of ninety odd cases. The patients so presented were chosen from a list of several hundred who applied personally or through their physician for treatment.

The medical board in making its selections was guided by a desire to secure cases typical of every class and every stage of the disease with the exception of cases so advanced as to be hopeless. The number treated is by far the largest ever inoculated in one day or in one city by Dr. Friedmann outside of Berlin.

Dr. Friedmann's methods were followed with the closest attention by the fifty or more physicians present, and his rapid diagnosis of the cases presented and his professional technique were the subjects of comment.

The cases represented the three main divisions of tuberculosis infection—pulmonary, glandular and bone or joint affection, and ranged from the early stages of the disease to well advanced cases of several years' duration.

One of the most interesting cases presented was that of a 14-months-old girl who had been a sufferer for about two months from the disease. The vein of the arm was so tiny that Dr. Friedmann found it impossible to make the usual intravenous injection, and he performed the rarely attempted operation on so young a child of inserting the needle in a vein of the neck. In this case he also made the extra injection in the hip. The little one bore the ordeal well and Dr. Friedmann remarked in a confident tone that its complete recovery might be expected.

Rich Clay Loam Will Produce Brightest Colored Sweet Peas

Sweet peas are very easy to grow, and thrive under ordinary garden conditions with very little care, but a little extra care will be amply repaid in larger and earlier blooms and brighter colors. The climate of the Pacific coast is ideal for their best development, and in no other locality will they produce blooms in such wonderful profusion and perfection.

In Indiana, where the ground ordinarily does not freeze to any depth, a good time to plant is in November, according to some who claim to have secured good results. They will apparently make very little growth during the winter. They will make a remarkable amount of root growth, of vines very early in the spring, producing better blooms and much earlier than if planted in spring. They may, however, be planted in March, April or May and will do very well.

The location should be open, away from trees and shrubbery, where they will get plenty of sunlight and air. They will thrive on any good garden soil, but a rich clay loam will produce the brightest colors. The ground should be well drained, especially if planted in the fall. A heavy application of well-rotted manure should be spaded under and thoroughly mixed with the soil, more to improve the mechanical condition and make it warm and porous than as a fertilizer, and after the seed is planted the ground should have a liberal top dressing of manure to protect it from the cold, keep it from packing, and to induce early growth in the spring. The seed should be planted about two inches apart in furrows; if planted in the fall the furrows should be six inches deep; if planted in the spring they should be from two to four inches deep, early plantings should be deeper than late plantings. If there is a hard crust on the ground break it by raking over the rows. As soon as the plants are up cultivate frequently and thoroughly. An occasional top dressing of well-rotted manure, bone meal or complete fertilizer containing nitrogen 4 per cent, potash 9 per cent, and phosphoric acid 8 per cent, will be beneficial.

If this seems to be too much trouble, and you are not particular to have the largest, brightest and earliest blooms, they may be planted the same as garden peas, and given the same attention and cultivation, and will furnish a profusion of very satisfactory blooms during the greater part of the season.

As they grow about six feet high, they require a trellis of some sort, and six-foot poultry netting makes the best support and the easiest to construct. They require considerable water, and it should be applied to the roots only; do not sprinkle the foliage. All of the blossoms should be picked each day; otherwise they will go to seed, and stop blooming. The more flowers you pick the more you will have.

Sweet peas are exceptionally free from disease and enemies. They are seldom troubled by anything except cut worms, which cut off the young shoot just after it is up. There is no sure cure for cut worms except digging around the plants and removing the worms. Worked slacked lime or potash into the soil will sometimes help; a handful of grass dipped in a solution of Paris green and placed on the row may kill them; or if shingles or short pieces of boards are placed on the ground the worms will come to the surface under them and may be destroyed.

The Princess will again show Tom J. Geraghty in "The Making of a Reporter" tonight besides the regular two reels of pictures. "The Making of a Reporter" was witnessed by a large crowd last night and the many friends of the former local newspaper man were greatly pleased with the film. The story is an original one and is told in Geraghty's way. The other picture tonight is a two reel feature "The Ways of Destiny." It is an Edison drama and is said to be a dramatic picture.

Those who have read John Fox's delightful story "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," must have realized that June, the primitive mountain maid, was indeed coy. In Eugene Walter's thrilling dramatization which comes to English's opera house March 13, 14 and 15, Miss Charlotte Walker is even more coy on the stage that Mr. Fox made her in the book.

Her love for Jack Hale transcends everything. Mr. Walker has realized this fully, and he has accented this trait of a primitive maid, such as June is, and which Miss Walker enacts wonderfully, bringing, as it were to life a character that millions have read and dreamed about.

TEACHERS MEETING.

The teachers of the St. Paul M. E. Sunday school will meet at the home of Miss Anna Bohannon in North Morgan street this evening at 7:30 o'clock. The subject to be discussed will be, "David Livingstone and Missions."

CHAPTER XXII.

The Great John Rawn.

Far off, deep in the underground regions of the city, at the focus of the republic's vast industrialism, the presses were reeling and clanging again, heavy with their story of disaster. The civilization of the day went on.

Somewhere out upon the mountain tops, somewhere in the forests, the forces of nature gathered, marched on toward the sea. Somewhere dumbly, mutely, uncomplaining, the great river and its mate, the great power, interstellar, not international—they two, as he but now vauntingly had dreamed, erstwhile silent partners of John Rawn—did their work. For whom? For what? Answer that, my brothers. The answer is your own. As you and I shall speak in that answer, so shall our children eat well, sleep well, in days yet to come, in this country which we still call our own, now all to little ours.

It was far past midnight when John Rawn again came down the stair, sobered and whitened by what he had seen in the death chamber. He tipped now back to the library door, through which and beneath whose silken curtains still there pierced a little shaft of light. He opened the door, peered in.

He saw Virginia sitting there silent, white, unagitated, her features cameo-sharp, her skin waxen, indeed marble white, a woman as motionless, as silent, apparently as little animate as the one he had left behind him in the death chamber beyond the stair. She turned her eyes, not her face, toward him, but did not speak. The edge of her gown was moist, stained.

John Rawn looked in turn at the long figure upon the couch, motionless, silent, its hands folded. Neither did it speak to him. Suddenly oppressed, suddenly afraid, he turned once more away. Irresolution was in his soul, uncertainty.

Rawn was hardly sure that he still lived, that he still was the same John Rawn he once had known. It seemed impossible that all these things could have fallen upon him, who had not deserved them! He pitied himself with a vast pity, revolting at the many injustices of fortune now crowding upon him, a wholly blameless man. Why, a day before, he had held in his hand power such as few men could equal; had had, presently before him, power none other ever could hope to equal. That opportunity still existed. But how now could he avail himself of that opportunity, how could he go on to be the great John Rawn, if this figure on the couch could not rise, could not speak to him, could not perform the obvious duty of rendering needful assistance to him, John Rawn? The cruelty of it all rankled in the great and justice-loving soul of Mr. Rawn. Why, he was penniless—he—John Rawn! He was not even sure about his wife, yonder. She had said things to him he could not understand, could not believe.

He left the room, and walked still farther down the hall, his head sagging, his lower lip pendulous, his face warped into a pucker of self-pity—so absorbed, that first he did not heed an approaching footfall. He paused almost in touch of some one who approached him in the half-lighted hall; some one who was coming down the stair and along the hall with steady tread.

There stood before him now the same tall, gray-haired, unfashionably dressed woman whom so recently he vaguely had noted at a distance in the hall above; some woman apparently busy with duties connected with the death chamber, as he had reflected when he saw her; some neighbor, he presumed, and certainly useful! It was kind of her to come at this time. He could not, at the time, recollect that he had seen her before. Yes, he would reward her—he would express his thanks.

He looked up at her now sharply, and gasped.

"Laura!" he exclaimed. "Is it you?" "Why, yes, John," answered the tall, gaunt woman gently. "Didn't you see me, up there? I suppose you were too much troubled to notice me, John. Yes, I'm here. I thought maybe I ought to come."

"But you see—this—" she held out to him the letter she had picked up from the hall table. "This didn't get to her—Grace—not in time. She died this morning, before noon, they tell me. She never knew her mother was coming to her when she was in trouble. She hadn't seen my letter to her, telling I was coming. I knew she was in trouble—and I saw all the stories in the papers. I thought I'd tell her I was coming to her—and you, John. She was my girl, after all! I knew she was in trouble."

"How did you know?" "Why, she wrote to me, of course. A girl always writes to her mother when she's in trouble. She wrote to me right often. She wasn't—well, she wasn't happy, John, and she often told me that. Something wrong was going on between her and Charley, I don't know what."

He stood looking at her, stupefied, as she went on, simply.

"John, married folks oughtn't to be apart too much. They sort of get weaned from each other. Grace was too ambitious. She'd got, here, what she thought her husband couldn't get, what she'd come to think she had to have. I might have told her better, but I wasn't here. Not that I'm reproving you, John, not at all. Besides, we have all got to go, some day. But I loved her. . . . And the baby."

"So did I love her, and the baby," he began. Tears were in his eyes. "Laura, I have had nothing but trouble. And now you have come here—"

"Yes, I know; it must seem a little queer to you, John; so I'm going right away again, to-night—before morning, if there's any way I can get downtown."

"Yes, yes!"

"Because, I know if I was seen around her, and people found out who I am, who I was—there might be some sort of talk which would be hard for you, John. I reckon you have trouble enough without that. I didn't want to bother you. I came mostly because of Grace. But—John, I always did like to tell the truth, and I have to tell it now—I came a little, too, because of you!"

"Of me? Why Laura?" "Yes, I did. I read the papers, of course, all the time. I have known about you, although you haven't heard of me. You have moved up in the world, John, and as for me—well, I have just gone back to Kelly Row, where we used to live. Of course, I'm glad you have been lucky. But then, lately, the papers all began to say you were in trouble. I've read all kinds of things about you. I heard that you were ruined—that you hadn't a dollar left in all the world!"

"It's true," he growled; "as near as I know, it's true. There is no hope for me now. It's all up!"

"But, John, you had so much money!"

"Yes, but it's gone now. It doesn't take it long to go when it starts the other way. The market makes a man, and it breaks him just as quick, and a lot quicker. It's done me, Laura. I'm ruined. I haven't a thing left in the world; not even my wife. Have you come here to twist me with it? What do I owe you, that I have to listen to you?"

"Why, nothing, John, that's true; nothing at all, not in the least. I have no right here at all, I know that. I understand that, when I—when I went away from here. But that wasn't why I came back to-night."

"Then why did you come? You always had the faculty, Laura, of doing the wrong thing. You've been a curse to me all my life!"

"Some of that's true, John," she answered simply. "And a good deal isn't. Maybe I said the wrong thing sometimes, or did the wrong thing. I never had much training. I was meant for Kelly Row, I reckon—I'd never have fitted in here. We tried it! But I didn't come to glorify myself because you've lost this place, and everything you had. I just thought—"

"Well, Laura, what was it you just thought? I can't stand here talking all the time. It isn't right, it isn't proper. I'm worn out!"

"Of course it isn't, John. I'm going right away. But you see, when I came away I just thought this way—here am I, an old woman that don't need much money any more. And there's Grace; and maybe now John has need for money when everybody's turned against him. And if he does need money, why—"

"What do you mean, Laura?" gasped John Rawn. "What's that you said about money?"

"How much would do you any good, John?" she asked, fumbling in her bulging hand-bag.

"I might as well wish for the moon as for a dollar," he said bitterly. "If I had a million, or a half-million, to-morrow, I'd pull it all together, even yet."

"A half million, John?" she said, taking out of her bag a little, wrinkled, flat port-monnaie such as women sometimes use for carrying change in the marketing; but still continuing her fumbling at the portly bag.

"It's a—It's a—Million—Dollars!"

"Yes, if I had a half million I could put this company on its feet, even yet—the secret's out that Halsey had—but I'd get it somewhere. I more than half believe those fellows have got it, somewhere else, somehow—that fellow Van's deep. You see they've been fighting me, Laura—made up a gang against me! I know who it was. If I had a half million I'd throw in with Van—he's got this secret somehow—he knows something about it. I'd throw in with him, and we'd whip the others, even yet! I'd get it all back in my hands even yet, I tell you!"

"But my God! Why do I stand talking about such things? What's the use? I'm down and out! I'd just as well be dead!"

"Well, John, what I always said of you was, that you seemed to know how to get things around the way you wanted them. I said to myself, what a shame it was he should have no money, when he needed it. I've got

Mr. Bebout is only one of many Rushville people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. John Sorrowful—"How'd'ya do, Anty Drudge? I'm waiting for Mary to hand me out a bite of cold lunch. I never go in the house on wash-day."

Anty Drudge—"Nonsense. Your wife washed with Fels-Naptha Soap today, and it was all done two hours ago. She has a nice hot lunch for you and had time to read and play the piano besides."

There was a woman who made a prayer to be saved from washday with all its care. Then she tried Fels-Naptha Soap. It wasn't exactly washday that she meant, but the hard rubbing, hot, steam-filled kitchens—all the disagreeable part of washday.

Fels-Naptha Soap answers that wish. Soap the clothes, roll and let them soak in cool or lukewarm water for 30 minutes, rub lightly, then rinse.

enough set aside to keep me, I reckon, for my few years. And here's what you gave me;—although, Grace—of course, John, I want enough used to put Grace and the baby away. The rest is yours."

He stood looking at her dumbly, as at last she extricated from the bag a thick bundle of folded papers, green, brown, pale pink.

"I got the bank to keep them for me," she said simply. "It is what you gave me—when—when I left here—"

He still stood looking at her, choking.

"Laura!" said he. "Has God come to my aid? This—I can't believe it! It's a million dollars! It's a million dollars!" His voice rose, breaking almost to a shriek. "It's a—It's a—million—dollars!"

"Well, take it, John, it's yours; you're welcome to it. I don't want it. It's done me no good. It's done none of us any good. All I want is, that you should take care of Grace's funeral, for that's only right, John. She was my girl, my baby! Take care of her, John, I have got to go back—home!"

In the next ensuing moment or so, what swift changes now were wrought in the late despair of our friend and hero, Mr. John Rawn, master of the International Power Company, already in imagination controlling in good part the destinies of a people—the great John Rawn, philanthropist, kindly employer, wise friend of the less favored ones of earth; the beneficent, kindly, omnipotent John Rawn? Why had he despaired, why had he ever doubted, why had he ever set himself even momentarily apart from that original destiny which always he had accorded to himself? Was he not a leader—had he not been devised to be so in the plans of the immortal gods, ages ago? Was he not one of the few select ones assigned to rule his fellow-men?

John Rawn stood before the old, gray woman, and scarcely heard her last words. He sighed deeply. His self-respect was coming back to him in waves, great, recurrent waves. At last a smile crossed his face. The imperious glance of the born ruler, of one better than his fellow-men, the look of the man set apart and licensed to rob and rule—returned once more to his eyes.

"It's a million dollars!" he cried aloud, exultantly, once more. "It's God has sent it to me! I'll take it as a sign. Watch me in the morning! I'll make them hunt their holes yet. By God! I will!"

"John, John, you mustn't swear, it isn't right! John!"

"I beg your pardon—er—er—Laura," he rejoined, with fine condescension, every instant now becoming more himself. "In fact, I want to thank you—it's clever of you, I must say. It isn't every woman who'd have done what you have done, I'm sure."

"Why wouldn't they, John? It isn't money a woman wants to make her happy. I've tried that. Grace tried it. It doesn't work. It takes something else besides money, I reckon. We're lucky when we find that, any of us, I reckon. If we don't, we've got to take just what God gives us. But money doesn't buy everything in the world. John, sometimes I think it buys about as little as anything you can think of!" She gulped just a little in her thin throat.

"All the same," said he firmly and generously, by this time almost fully the great John Rawn once more, "it was very decent of you, Laura."

"Well, never mind about that, John. It was you who made it. I never did understand how you earned it so fast. I'm glad if it will do you any good. And see, John," she added shyly, fumbling again in her bag, "I brought you a little present, John. I've been doing these, you see. I make quite a lot out of it. I never used any of that money you gave me, at all—I did these things—the way I did before, when we were getting our start together, John, you know. I thought—maybe—you'd like a pair."

She held out to him a pair of braces, embroidered carefully in silks. He took them in his hand. She also looked at them closely, in professional scrutiny, her steel bowed spectacles on nose. She pronounced them good.

"But, John," she added curiously—"you know, while I was up there, doing what I could for Grace and the baby—it seemed to me like as if I heard some funny sort of noise down here—something like a shot. What was it?"

"It was some of those confounded laboring people," said John Rawn, frowning. "Yes—they came here after Halsey."

"Well," said John Rawn, "Halsey—Charley Halsey—you remember him, I believe? Well, they shot him."

"Good-night, Laura," he added suddenly, and held out his hand to her, generously, nobly. "I'm very sleepy. I've been up so long—and I've a lot to do to-morrow. After all, there's no use in our having hard feelings. Good-by."

Evidence That Yeggmen Started Blaze at Carmel.

THE POSTOFFICE WAS ROBBED

This Was Revealed When Boys Found in an Old Log Cabin a Mile West of Village Which Suffered Loss of Its Business District, a Can of Money and a Quantity of Stamped Envelopes Taken From the Postoffice.

Carmel, Ind., March 12.—A large number of stamped envelopes and a sack containing about a gallon of nickels, pennies and dimes, which were identified later by Postmaster A. V. Rayle as the property of the postoffice, was found in an old log cabin, one mile west of here, by Ralph Graves and Paul Sanders. The old building is used by Charles Graves, a farmer, to store feed.

Young Graves and Sanders had gone to the shed for oats. When they opened the door they found a stamped envelope protruding from under a board. On raising the board they found the sack of money. They brought it to town, and Postmaster Rayle readily identified it.

This supports the theory that the fire of Sunday morning, which destroyed the business district, was started by robbers. It was supposed burglars had attacked the safe in the postoffice and the explosion set fire to the building. Mr. Rayle, however, said the sack of money found in the log cabin was left in a tin can on a shelf near the safe.

The handles of the safe were found broken after the fire. The safe has not yet been opened, and it is not known whether anything was taken from it. The postal authorities have been notified and will investigate. At the time of the fire Sunday morning several explosions were heard, and it is now believed these explosions caused the fire.

STATE PASTEUR LABORATORY

Only Two Out of 131 Patients Have Died of Rabies.

Indianapolis, March 12.—Since the establishment of the Pasteur laboratory, June 12, 1911, the Indiana state board of health has treated 131 persons to prevent rabies. Only two of that number died. In his monthly report Dr. Will Shimer, superintendent of the state pathological laboratory, presents data concerning the results of the Pasteur treatment as administered in big laboratories and reaches the conclusion that deaths of two persons taking the treatment in Indiana "cannot be attributed to a failure of the treatment, but must be due to the short incubation period—thirty-six days—which did not permit the establishment of immunity." Statistics show, says Dr. Shimer, that the total mortality of persons bitten, having received the anti-rabies inoculation, is pretty constantly about 1 per cent.

There are at this time sixteen persons receiving the anti-rabies treatment at the state laboratory.

TOO MANY OTTO BUCKS HERE

Laporte Family Besieged by Claimants of Fortune.

Laporte, Ind., March 12.—Two Otto Bucks have appeared as claimants for the estate of William Buck, wealthy manufacturer, who died recently leaving his fortune to his son Otto Buck, who disappeared eighteen years ago, with the provision that it is to remain intact until 1930, when, if the son does not appear, it is to be divided among the heirs. One Otto Buck living in Richmond, Ind., has retained attorneys to prosecute his claim that he is the long-lost son, while Burk Keifer, who says he is a San Francisco attorney, has arrived asserting he represents the rightful heir, and is here to establish legal claim. Dozens of Otto Bucks are appearing in all parts of the country and the family in this city is kept busy disproving the claims of supposed sons.

Didn't Survive His Wound.

Indianapolis, March 12.—Ben Weiss, twenty-six years old, is dead at the city hospital as a result of a bullet wound in his chest, believed to have been self-inflicted after he had shot and killed Miss Ethel Finley last Wednesday night at the home of his brother, Claude G. Weiss.

It Made Him Despondent.

Hartford City, Ind., March 12.—Dr. A. G. Six of Lawrence, Mich., a former Hartford City resident, shot himself, according to a telegram received here. The loss of his wife and daughter, who were killed in an explosion in their home several weeks ago, is believed to have driven him to suicide.

A Clean-Up at Hartford City.

Hartford City, Ind., March 12.—All the resorts of the city have been closed by order of the prosecutor. The inmates and keepers were fined and instructed to leave.

It is said that John Purroy Mitchell, president of the board of aldermen of New York city, is the man that President Wilson has in mind for collector of the port to succeed William Loeb.

MR. WANAMAKER PAID DOUBLE THE AMOUNT

Wanted to Make Sure of Full Restitution.

Washington, March 12.—The treasury department has made announcement of the receipt of $100,000 from John Wanamaker, as an indemnity and compromise of civil liability for customs irregularities. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis issued a statement in which he said that in the latter part of 1911 or early in 1912, special agents in New York received information that there had been certain irregular practices in the handling of "sample cases" imported by the Wanamaker firm. An investigation into the importations as far back as 1905 showed a shortage of about $50,000, and as no books or records prior to 1905 could be found, Mr. Wanamaker volunteered to double the sum in order to make certain that full restitution was made to the government. It is not charged that Mr. Wanamaker had any knowledge of the transactions.

GOING AFTER ARSON RING

Forty Chicagoans Sought Following Confession of Travelling Firebug.

Chicago, March 12.—Indictments against forty Chicagoans, thirteen of whom are said to compose the upper council of the so-called arson ring, which has defrauded insurance companies out of more than $1,000,000 through its many incendiary fires, will be sought by the state. Criminal action against these men, some of whom are described as prominent in certain business circles, will come as a direct result of the extensive confession made at South Bend by Benjamin Fink, "travelling torch bearer" for the "fire octopus."

Her Disguise Not Sufficient.

Butte, Mont., March 12.—A young woman who gave her name as Ella Lease, her age as twenty-three, her last home as Chicago, was arrested here for masquerading as a boy and, in charge of a humane officer, has been taken to the Florence Crittenden home at Helena, to prevent her from carrying out a determination to commit suicide because of her discovery and humiliation. Her story is that she donned male attire as a last resort to maintain virtue and respectability in an effort to earn an honest living. She found she could not do it as a girl.

Didn't Have Any Evidence.

Kieff, March 12.—The indictment of Menahill Bellis, a poor, uneducated Hebrew, who was accused of the ritual murder of a sixteen-year-old boy named Iustaninaki, has been dropped for lack of proof. The "Black Hundreds," which is another name for the Russian reactionaries, have been pressing this case and tried to inflame the mob at Kieff. Bellis is a simple man of the most humble class, who spent some months in jail for a crime of which he declares he was absolutely innocent.

Killed by Boiler Explosion.

Vincennes, Ind., March 12.—John H. Meyer, fifty-six years old, was instantly killed when a boiler of a portable sawmill outfit which he was firing exploded. His brothers, Fred and Henry Meyer, were dangerously injured.

Cold in Chest

Sore Throat, Quinzy, Bronchitis and Pleurisy are most prevalent at this time of the year. The sooner you use the better the chances are for checking these diseases before they are attended with danger, and leading to a quick recovery. Because of its wholesomeness, purity and marvelous curative virtues, Dr. Jones' Liniment has become the favorite with thousands of families.

Dr. Jones' Liniment

(Formerly Beaver Oil)

It penetrates as soon as applied to the seat of the disease, and immediately relieves any pain or ache. No home where there are children or old people can afford to be without it. 50 cents per bottle. Sold by Thos. Lytle, F. E. Wolcott and all leading druggists.

GRANDMOTHER USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER FADED OR GRAY HAIR.

Mixed With Sulphur It Makes Hair Soft, Beautiful; Cures Dandruff.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

VENUS AND MOON CLOSE TOGETHER

Phenomena Occurs Every Month But it Was Unusual Last Night Because of Brilliancy.

MARKED CONTRAST IS NOTED

An exceptional case of the conjunction of Venus with the moon occurred last night, and the marked contrast of the two planets on a clear evening aroused much comment. The conjunction of the two planets occurs each month, but last evening's sight was rare and something of a phenomena in that the conjunction occurred at a time when Venus is at its most brilliant phase. During the next thirty days the planets will be far separated, and at the end of the period will be seen closely together again, but the brilliancy of Venus will have waned much and it is rarely that the two planets appear to be so closely together as they were last evening.

MANY WEEKLIES TO BE DISCONTINUED

If Governor Signs Moellering Bill,
Several Newspapers Will Suspend Publication at Once.

SEMI-WEEKLY REPUBLICAN

The passage of the Moellering House Bill No. 68 by the legislature is calculated to do away with the publication of many weekly and semi-weekly newspapers in Indiana, if the bill becomes a law by the signature of Governor Ralston. It has been sent to the governor, and if he accepts it, the Semi-Weekly Republican, as well as many other similar newspapers published by companies having a daily, will be discontinued.

The bill is for an act to provide for the publication of legal notices effecting all township and county business, in daily or weekly newspapers, repealing all laws in conflict therewith and declaring an emergency.

The present law provides that most of the county and township legal notices shall be printed in weekly newspapers. Many such publications have been run merely to get the legal notices. An effort was made to get a similar bill through the last legislature.

HOME TALENT PLAY.

Greensburg News: The teachers of Fugit township, assisted by several young men of Clarksburg, will give a play on Friday and Saturday nights at the Assembly Hall in Clarksburg for the purpose of raising funds to purchase library books. The play selected for the occasion is one that is calculated to please any audience, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

votes would be cast there before six o'clock.

The vote in No. 7, cast at E. A. Lee's implement store, was light as much of the precinct lies outside of the city. Only 60, about a fourth of the votes polled, had been cast at noon.

Only one man living in the city voted in precinct No. 8 at the Pinnell-Tompkins Lumber, and here the vote was light. Only 64 out of a possible 210 had been cast at one o'clock.

A hundred and five out of a possible 230 votes had been cast in precinct No. 9 at the old Catholic church at one o'clock.

Ninety out of a possible 170 were cast up to one o'clock in precinct No. 10, voting at Spurrier's music store in the Poundstone building.

NO RIGHT TO GRUMBLE.

Connersville News: No one can justly blame Senator Fleming for voting and working for the holiday liquor bill. To him, who makes and sells beer, it means simply four more days for the consumption of his product. That's business, and the legislature is one of Mr. Fleming's active fields of operation. So long as the people of the State send representatives and senators to the General Assembly whom men of the Fleming brand can control, they have no right to grumble at the work they do.

The atmospheric changes during a thunderstorm accelerate the discharge of all gases, and it is now asserted that it is these, and not the electrical discharges, which sour milk.

Showing How You Can Be Stylishly Dressed at a Moderate Cost

The Corner Store

Our exhibit of spring styles is important to the woman who wants to know what to wear, but it is of even greater importance to the woman who wants to know what to pay.

We have been as careful in our values as in our styles. We know that neither can be beaten, and we doubt if you can see their equals anywhere else.

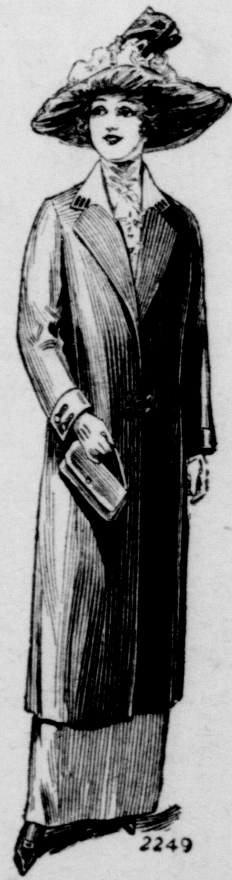

This is especially true of the glorious styles and colors shown in our Wooltex coats, suits and skirts.

The woman who buys a Wooltex coat or suit gets a combination of style and Wooltex prices are no more value impossible to duplicate, nothing better can be made—tailors don't know how to improve Wooltex workmanship. Fabrics are all pure wool, styles distinctive and pleasing, wear guaranteed for at least two seasons, and, with all this, than those asked for the ordinary run of tailor-made garments.

We recommend this showing to the immediate attention of every woman interested in good style at moderate cost.
